As you can see by the photo our youngsters have grown (two in center of photo) and are looking beautiful in their summer colors and velvet antlers. As summer comes to its end the reindeer have increased their intake of beet pulp and loose mineral, they consume eight or more pounds each of grain per day and forage freely on pasture. Soon they will shed velvet; normally done during the night, and as the days get shorter and the nights cooler you can to see them slowly change to their winter colors. All of our reindeer are old enough now to have that oh so famous click in their step (Up on the House Top, click, click, click).

The elves from Reindeer Games spent a little time with us. What did we do; played with the reindeer of course!

Sampson gets ready to go with Breanne and Zephyr.

Jasper does a great job keeping his flock of 42 chickens safe from predators.

Great Pyrenees are excellent livestock guard dogs. When our reindeer fence is finally complete our dogs will have access to the perimeter area around them.

Young Living essential oils are used extensively on our farm. Lemon oil has become one of my favorite with the reindeer. Used with DiGize and given with an oral syringe this combination has done wonders for our herd.

Lemon: Immune stimulant (increases white blood cells), antiseptic, anxiety, digestive problems, intestinal parasites, respiratory
Body Systems Affected: Digestive, Immune, Respiratory

DiGize: Digestive function, intestinal parasites
Body System affected: Digestive

With the use of these oils feed consumption is increase and the reindeer are very relaxed. Their overall health is improved.

Raven: pneumonia, upper respiratory, viral infections
Body System Affected: Respiratory

Used with E_mu oil and applied around nostrils and throat, also inhaled. Used during high humidity and/or dry dusty weather

Melrose: Used with E_mu oil and applied to antler injuries, and/or any other injuries.

All of our animals are given Young living essential oils as a part of our routine for health maintenance and treatment of injuries. Reindeer seem to require a little more health maintenance.

Visit our website to see our new page on education and internships.

Also new and offered for sale on our website are custom designed reindeer carts.

Remember E_mu products make great gifts when looking for stocking stuffers this season don't forget to check out our online store.
